The NIJ Coaching Model is a five-year project with Dr. Lovins and the Justice System Partners; funded through NIJ. The model is currently being implemented locally with parole and across the Country. SCDOC juvenile and adult programs will participate in implementing the model and updates will be provided to the board.

IJPs can help prevent the incarceration of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD) or mental illness (MI). An IJP is similar to Individual Education Plans (IEP) used in schools. IJPs help educate the criminal justice system professionals understand behaviors related to I/DD and MI and provide safety rather than detention of these individuals. A pamphlet was presented that outlined the initiative.
