NATIONAL MAGAZINE RECOGNIZES EMS LIEUTENANT

(Sedgwick County, Kan.) – EMS Magazine has selected through a competitive review process Sedgwick County Emergency Medical Service Lieutenant Paul Misasi as one of this year's Emerging Leaders in EMS. To date, this designation has been given to only 20 individuals.

Lt. Misasi's view about the profession and advice to his peers is included in the magazine's "Emerging Leaders' Views from the Field" forum.

When asked about his leadership philosophy, Lt. Misasi responded by saying, "My philosophy of EMS leadership is servant leadership ... not by virtue of a position or title, but through the relationships forged with co-workers and my service to the people I work for."

Sedgwick County EMS director Steve Cotter said of Lt. Misasi's appearance in the magazine, "We've known for a long time that Paul is an exemplary member of our team and we're thrilled his dedication and leadership has been recognized on a national stage."
