Why use family planning/birth control?

- Eighty-five percent of women who do not use contraceptives become pregnant each year.
- Nearly half of all pregnancies in the United States are unplanned—almost three million pregnancies.
- In addition to reducing the chance of pregnancy, certain types of birth control, such as condoms, can reduce the chance of contracting sexually transmitted diseases.
- The unintended pregnancy rate is highest among women who are ages 18-24, unmarried, low-income, black or Hispanic.
- Although the rates are still high, unplanned pregnancy rates for teens have declined in the last few decades (ages 15-19). This is likely due to higher rates of contraceptive use.
- Efforts to achieve further decreases should focus on reducing risky behavior, promoting the use of effective contraceptive methods and improving the effectiveness with which all methods are used.

Do minors need parental consent to be seen at the Family Planning Clinic?

No, parental consent is not required.
