WICHITA, KAN. – A man was sentenced to prison for the repeated sexual assault of an underage girl. On Wednesday, District Judge Tyler Roush sentenced Bryce Hanks, 40 of Wichita, to life in prison without the possibility of parole until after 25 years and 570 months which will run consecutive to the life sentence.

In February, a jury in Judge Roush's court found Hanks guilty of 10 felony crimes including rape, aggravated indecent liberties with a child, and aggravated criminal sodomy.

Hanks began sexually assaulting the girl when she was nine years old. The victim is now 18.
